Quick Aid Seen for Germany

(HIMSELF)

ZIONISTS—it appears strange

that anyone could be so silly as to prepare now for the end of the world—he may be right when he predicts the end of the political party next year—NOT THE END—merely some defeats they least expected and IOWA may fool them—Voliva still claims the world is flat—he should have existed thousands of years ago when the folks thought that the world was flat, that there was a mountain at each end, a filament stretched across the top of each, running from one to the other—that if you could climb high enough you could get on top of the filament WHICH WAS HEAVEN—if the builders would have built the high buildings then that we have today—they would have been burned at the stake for TRYING TO GET INTO HEAVEN by an unnatural route—times do change—and in another 100 years, after all these prophecies have been forgotten, the people will be here just the same, with as much CORRUPTION, GRAFT, SIN, PLEASURE AND UNHAPPINESS—as there is today—AND MORE. Here's hoping the Zionists do not take matters too seriously—and end their lives through FEAR—foolish beliefs have caused many deaths. DON'T YOU WORRY—the world will be here all OK—long after you and I are gone.

PRESTON—some folks up there some beautiful pleasure park of real pleasures—swimming lake and everything—a fine crowd, interesting and attentive—just a few minutes after I started my talk, the thunder and lightning started—I looked for all to rush for their autos and start homeward—they didn't—they remained for an hour more—I hope the farmers will soon get the idea of starting ONE ORGANIZATION FOR FARMERS, with no one admissible to membership BUT FARMERS—then they will win—and NOT UNTIL THEN—remember my prophecies—it will be just that—regardless of what any politician tells you.

HOOVER—he interviewed recently—Castle the Sec'y. of State and Mills, Sec'y. of Treasury—acting Secretaries—they talked about the German financial troubles—LET EUROPE ALONE AND ATTEND TO AMERICA'S TROUBLES—she surely has enough to keep all the politicians busy for another year. That's our trouble—if we had kept our noses out of the last war, we would be sitting pretty now and a few hundred thousand American boys would be here with their mothers and wives. Europe took care of herself for many hundreds of years before America was discovered and I feel she can do so yet—for an experiment—at least let her TRY IT.

MANCHESTER, IOWA—the editor up there surely does not like me—he is not the only one up there that does not—a Doctor by the name of Maythaker is going to give testimony next week against me—the Baker Hospital—I love to see doctors on the stand—they know so much—you folks ought to attend this taking of depositions up there next week—by the way—don't forget that I am coming up to your town next Sunday, for a speaking date and will enjoy meeting all of you folks—friends and enemies alike are invited—it will be a good opportunity for the editor up there to question me on the platform if he likes—maybe he would like to argue things over—I'll agree to it—anything to make things interesting.

TIREDSOME—it surely is to read of the long list of deaths by auto-lets each week—when; OH WHEN—will all learn to be more careful—a mechanical mishap cannot be helped—but as soon as some learn to keep both hands on the wheel, and the booze bottle in the garage—we will have less mishaps—it's really miraculous that the number is not doubled.

TWO BOMBINGS CAUSE CHICAGO POLICE WORRY

Man Almost Loses His Life in Battle With Two Bombers

CHICAGO—(INS)—Police today were confronted with two bombings, one in which a man narrowly escaped with his life as he battled two bombers.

Because of recent trouble with terrorists, Michael Marquette, an auto salesman, posted himself in the doorway of an apartment building across from the auto salesman. Shortly after the two policemen, who had been guarding the place, left, Marquette noticed two men drive past the salesman several times.

Saw Bomb Placed
He saw the car draw to the curb and one of the men place a bomb and light its fuse. Marquette lunged at the driver of the car but was beaten off by the other bomber.

The porter, Edward G. Monroe, fled from the building and threw the bomb into the street where it exploded.

The bombers made their getaway. Joseph Bobbin, owner of the sales company, told police that a former business associate had been threatening him.

Bomb Explodes in Door
Another bomb exploded in the doorway of a restaurant causing damage of $400. James Coffman, the owner said that he could not explain a motive for the attack.

This was the second restaurant bombing in the past few days and police said that jealousy of cafe owners was undoubtedly the cause.

POSSEMEN SEEK ASSERTED FIEND

Man Kills Youth and Then Assaults His Girl Companion

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo.—(INS)—Scores of possemen aided police today in a search for an asserted fiend who Monday night killed Louis J. (Buddy) Palmer, 19, and assaulted his girl companion, Glenda King, 18.

The girl told police that she and Palmer, son of a local businessman, were seated in an automobile in Prospect park, on the outskirts of the city, when a roughly dressed man appeared suddenly and covered them with a revolver.

"Get out of there, and be quick about it," he ordered.

The girl, according to police, stepped from the car with Palmer, both raising their arms. Without warning, the holdup opened fire, shooting Palmer through the body.

He then assaulted the girl, and afterward forced her to drive him around for nearly two hours before releasing her. Miss King was in a hysterical condition when she reached her home and was rushed to a hospital. She was able to give a good description of the assailant.

DRUNK ATTACKS DEPUTY SHERIFF

Cedar Rapids Officer Severely Cut in Row With Prisoner

CEDAR RAPIDS, Ia.—(INS)—Deputy sheriff Jay Davis is in a serious condition here today following an attack on him by a prisoner, allegedly intoxicated, with a pocket knife.

On the way in one of the men struck at Davis and then knifed him.

Enters Prison He Helped to Build

The above picture, rushed from El Paso, Texas, by special plane to Los Angeles, and telephoned from there to Chicago, shows Former Secretary of the Interior Albert B. Fall just prior to his entrance into the New Mexico state prison at Santa Fe to start serving his sentence of a year and a day for accepting a bribe while a member of President Harding's cabinet. Ironically, Fall will serve time in a prison he helped build when he was a political power in the state and a member of the prison board.

ALBERT B. FALL BANDITS SHOOT ENTERS PRISON THREE OFFICERS

Former Secretary of Interior to Serve Year in Pen

SANTA FE, N. M.—(INS)—Albert Bacon Fall, former member of the cabinet of President Harding, today was a prisoner in the New Mexico state penitentiary. He will be given a number later.

Fall entered the prison here last night at 10:15 p. m. to begin his year and a day sentence, imposed on him for accepting a bribe of $100,000 in connection with the lease of the Elk Hills Naval Oil Reserve to Edward Doheny.

Sitting in his ambulance bed in which he left El Paso last Saturday night the former cabinet officer made his entrance into the walled enclosure at 40 miles an hour.

A huge crowd of curiosity seekers was gathered at the penitentiary gates to watch his arrival.

The entrance was brightly lit with large red flares, set off by newspaper cameramen, who had kept a long vigil waiting for him to arrive.

As the ambulance sped by they clicked their cameras, obtaining the only pictures that will be available of the cabinet officer entering the prison.

Today after a physical examination he will go through the regular routine of being photographed and fingerprinted.

United States Marshal Joe Tondore and Warden Ed Swale today are likely to take Fall into custody on his arrival at Lamy and motored along to Santa Fe behind the Fall ambulance—a "damned hearse," the aged prisoner called it.

THREE ROBBER SUSPECTS HELD

Ames Officers Arrest Trio Driving Car From Illinois

AMES—(INS)—Three men, driving a car with an Illinois license and a Cicero plate, today are being held here as suspected bank robbers.

Chief of Police W. J. Cure and two officers, cruising along a residence street this morning, noticed the three studying a road map, and became suspicious when the three started away as the police car neared.

Forced to the curb by the police car, the trio surrendered without resistance, but refused to give police their names. Police found a high powered rifle, a sawed-off shotgun, several automatic pistols and a suitcase full of ammunition.

Police believe the men were preparing to burglarize a local bank. Chief James E. Riden and a fingerprint expert of the state bureau of identification will question them.

ATTEMPT MADE TO DEFRAUD N. BAKER OF $850

Chicago Man Tries to Work New, Original Kind of Racket

Something new in the line of "rackets" by which its originators hoped to mulct Norman Baker, publisher of the Free Press, of $850, came to light Monday, when the local man received a request from the Chicago Herald and Examiner, the name of which was used in the preliminary deals, to have a Mr. Clark or his representative placed under arrest if he called at Mr. Baker's office in Muscatine.

Last week Mr. Baker received a long distance telephone call from a man giving his name as Mr. Clark who said he was with the editorial staff of the Herald and Examiner. The man declared the Chicago newspaper was about to publish a "bold, heretofore, regular, regular edition," which would contain a powerful editorial exposing the truth about the medical profession and others in need of exposure; that the day had come when there was going to be a change in many things. The editorial, the caller added, was to be written by a member of the Chicago bar association, and Mr. Baker was one of the few men in the country selected to help "put the edition over."

Asks for $850
Mr. Baker was asked to contribute $850 towards alleviating some of the expense and Mr. Clark said he would send a representative to Muscatine one day last week. When the day arrived, and no representative came, Mr. Baker received another call from the man who said he was Mr. Clark, and was told the representative would be in Muscatine on the following day.

Mr. Baker told the caller not to send a man to this city with the expectation of getting $850.

"I would not say eight cents for an editorial written by a member of the Bar association of Chicago," Mr. Baker told him, "because this group belong in the same bed with the medical association or is created by influence and I never paid for an editorial I would write myself."

Writes to Editor
However, seeing the advantage of getting the full story in a metropolitan newspaper, Mr. Baker sent a letter to Mr. Clark in care of the editorial department of the Herald and Examiner, enclosing data regarding cancer which is being cured at the Baker hospital here, proof of his statements and other information, and wrote he would pay for an entire page to have the matter published. He added:

JOCKEY BEATEN BY GANGSTERS

NEW YORK—(INS)—"Buddy" Ensor, of Baltimore, Md., well known as a jockey was in a serious condition in Fordham hospital today following an attack administered by gangsters who, according to Ensor, were planning to kidnap Eddie Cantor, actor, George Jessel, producer, and Nils T. Granlund.

Ensor spent most of the evening searching for the trio, according to Walters in various restaurants and night clubs. He was found severely beaten later in a clump of weeds.

MAN WANTED IN STABBING HELD

IOWA CITY, Ia.—(INS)—Vern MacComb, a race track driver from Indianapolis, today is on his way to Johnson county and is being held in connection with the stabbing of Lytle Lenix of near Lone Tree, May 13.

Six Capone Henchmen Arrested By U. S. Government Dry Agents

CHICAGO—(INS)—The United States government today continued its war on the beer syndicate of "Scarface Al" Capone, closing three liquor dens and arresting six alleged henchmen.

Agents watched a beer truck drive up and unload five kegs of beer. When they investigated and arrested the driver, he turned out to be Tony Radia, who was arrested a week ago in command of a stalled beer truck. Radia was arrested and shortly Joe Fusco, Capone lieutenant, appeared and demanded his release. However,

Radia was held and Fusco, for several months the object of a federal search, stalked out of the police station unapprehended.

Arrested with Radia were Harry Alcock and George Cargio. Continuing their raids in Cicero, stronghold of Capone, the agents seized 4,507 gallons of alcohol, 47,000 gallons of mash, and two 500 gallon stills. John Lang, in charge of the plant, was taken in custody.

In another raid, agents arrested John Libero and John Stana when they seized a 750 gallon alcohol deodorizer and 50 gallons of alcohol.

MAN ASSAULTS GIRL AGED NINE

Child Fights for Her Life; Attacker Is Put in Pen

WATERLOO—(INS)—While nine-year-old Juanita Green battles for her life at a local hospital, James Freeman Hellyer, 29, father of three children, is spending his first day in the state reformatory at Anamosa, where he has been sentenced for the balance of his life on a charge of assault on the child.

The child is in a critical condition, and a crisis is expected within twenty-four hours.

Hellyer, who was captured Sunday near Cedar Falls, was apparently little concerned over his fate. Following his arrest he made a complete confession, according to officers, who said he accompanied them to the scene of the attack as he again told the story.

His unconcern did not change as he entered the court room, and assistant county attorney Burr C. Towne told the court the story of the attack. He was apparently unmoved as Judge A. B. Lovejoy pronounced the sentence.

Hellyer, according to the story told police, had spent the evening at the home of the child's parents, and he accompanied them when he departed at 9 o'clock last Friday evening.

He took her to the river bank a short distance from her home where he attacked her, according to police. Returning the following morning it was said, he discovered the child lying on the bank still in a semi-conscious condition.

Leaving her there, he went to Cedar Falls, said police, where he spent the night at the home of a friend. Sunday he requested to be taken to the outskirts of the city. His host, Ira L. Byers, became suspicious at Hellyer's actions and notified police. The arrest followed.

GUNMAN GUILTY OF CONSPIRACY

Gangster and 'Moll' Violate Mann Act, Is Charge

CHICAGO—(INS)—"Machine gun" Jack McGurn, suspect in the St. Valentine's day massacre, and his "blond alibi," Louise Rolt, today were found guilty of conspiring to violate the Mann act.

Federal Judge Walter C. Lindley sentenced the gangster to two years in the federal penitentiary on each of three counts, the sentences to run concurrently, and sent Louise to the county jail for four months.

The judge ruled that after McGurn serves two years on the first count, he shall be placed on probation and if at the end of five years he has conducted himself as a good citizen, he shall be discharged.

McGurn was the only man formally accused of the massacre of seven "Bugs" Moran gangsters in a Clark street garage in 1929. However, the blond Louise aided him to escape trial by providing an alibi for him.

Defense counsel for the gangster and his bride of less than three months made a motion for appeal and McGurn's bond was set at $15,000 and Louise's at $5,000.

CENTRALIA, Ill.—(INS)—The lifeless body of Frank E. Hamman, air mail pilot, was found beside his wrecked plane west of here by a searching party today.

Hamman, flying an American airplane, left St. Louis at 11:30 Monday night and is believed to have crashed about 3 a. m. this morning.

The searching party which found Hamman's body was formed after a farmer reported that he heard the drone of a plane circling above his farm and apparently looking for a place to land during the heavy rainstorm early this morning.

The body and the wreckage was found eight miles west of here. Hamman had apparently been instantly killed.

The death of the air mail pilot marks the first time in several years that an airmail pilot has been killed in this vicinity.

HOOVER'S PLAN HELPS CLARIFY MANY PROBLEMS

Propose to Extend Short Credit to Help Germany

WASHINGTON—(INS)—President Hoover proposed to the nations of the world, assembled at London today, that they come to the aid of tottering Germany with a four-point program of relief, which will include the maintenance of existing credits and the conversion of short term credits into long term credits.

The American proposals were worked out here at a White House conference which included the president, senator Dwight W. Morrow and ambassador Charles G. Dawes, and were laid before the ministerial conference in London today.

American Program
The essentials of the American program are:

1. There shall be a clearing of the European political atmosphere through "mutual good-will and understanding" on the part of the various nations, but principally between Germany and France and the latter's satellites.
2. Foreign bankers shall maintain their existing credits in Germany, which amount to some $1,200,000,000, of which about $600,000,000 is American.
3. An international commission shall be appointed to examine Germany's financial and economic structure to determine whether "new money" is essential to Germany's rehabilitation.
4. Short term credits to be extended into long term credits if it appears necessary.

Beautiful New Theater Planned By Ludy Bosten

Above is a decorator's sketch of the interior of the beautiful new theater which will be located on the site now occupied by the Armory building on East Third street. Work on the new theater, which will seat approximately 1,000, will be started in the near future according to Ludy Bosten (inset), president of the Bosten Amusement Corporation, which owns the building. Completion of the work and opening of the theater before winter is planned.

Muscatine Soon to Have Most Beautiful Theater in State

Plans Announced for Armory Remodeling By Ludy Bosten

THEATRE FIRM INCORPORATED

The armory on East Third street, now utilized as an apartment building and garage, is to be transformed into the most beautiful theater in Iowa, according to an announcement made today by Ludy Bosten, president of the Bosten Amusement Corporation, owner of the building.

It is planned to begin work almost immediately and contracts are to be distributed among Muscatine business firms as far as possible. The new theater will seat approximately 1,000 with the main auditorium seating capacity to the number of 500 and the balcony accommodating about 250. Plans call for completion of the work and the opening of the theater before winter.

The Bosten plan, which is a part of the remodeling plan, were completed some time ago. A Spanish Garden

A Spanish motif has been carried out in planning the new theater and one of the interesting features is to be the out-of-doors garden effect obtained by the installation of a sky ceiling, with twinkling stars, moonlight and drifting clouds. Comparatively few theaters throughout the country now boast of the sky effect as the expense is quite heavy. The color scheme will be in harmony with the general Spanish Garden effect.

Complete comfort for the patrons, as well as beauty, have been worked out in the plans for the new theater. There will be three sections of seats on the main floor with 32 inch spacing between rows, instead of the customary 28 inches, thus affording entrance to inside seats without the necessity of requiring those already seated to stand.

Four Aisles Planned

There will be four aisles leading to the seats, to that the rows may be entered from either end, and aisles being planned along each side wall. The chairs will be 21 inches wide instead of 19, the size generally in use in movie theaters, and will be air cushioned. They have specially designed standards to harmonize with the general decorative scheme, and the backs are to be upholstered with moquette.

The box office will be flush with the sidewalk and a sub-lobby will give entrance into the main lobby. The lobby planned will accommodate a large crowd, affording patrons comfort in waiting for a chance to enter the theater proper. Entrance to the balcony will be from this lobby. At the rear of the lobby a short flight of steps leads to a series of doors giving entrance into the semi-circular foyer. The foyer will be decorated to conform to the garden effect of the auditorium. A play room for small children has been arranged for the basement.

Washed-air Ventilation

One of the features sure to meet the approval of the public will be the washed-air ventilating system. In the summer, the air coming into the theater will be cooled to the proper temperature and then distributed. In the winter, the theater will be heated in the same manner, the air being heated to the proper temperature. In addition to providing scientific ventilation, this system will eliminate unsightly radiators and hot air registers in the auditorium.

The stage opening will be 34 feet, large enough to accommodate understage or stage shows. The depth will be 24 feet and the latest stage rigging will be installed. All equipment used in the projection room will be of the very latest type and a special screen will complete the facilities for assuring the patrons of perfect reproduction of pictures.

To Display Pictures

An orchestra pit is provided for and is of the latest sunken type which will accommodate orchestras of symphonic size, if necessary. The

That the information need not carry the advertisement of the Baker hospital.

Monday Mr. Baker received a long distance telephone call from the editor of the Chicago paper who said that there is not now a Mr. Clark employed in the editorial department. Mr. Baker was requested by the editor to have anyone who came to his office in Muscatine, representing himself to be from Mr. Clark, placed under arrest immediately.

Two Are Freed on Reckless Driving Charges by Horst

Charges of reckless driving against Harold TeStrake, placed following his arrest Sunday evening, were dismissed upon motion of the city attorney this morning when the defendant was arraigned before Police Judge H. D. Horst, and a warrant charging him with speeding was sworn out.

The warrant was to have been served this afternoon and the time for his hearing set by Judge Horst.

Paul Fisher and Clarence Stein, who testified they were riding with Mr. Pitchfork when the arrest was made, were witnesses. They declared that to the best of their knowledge the car in which they were riding had not traveled more than 25 miles an hour just previous to the time the driver was halted by Fred Kopp, motorcycle officer.

Officer Kopp testified that in his opinion the car was proceeding west on Second street at a rate of about 40 miles an hour. Pitchfork had turned out to pass a string of cars before the arrest was made, Kopp testified.

Streets were blocked off around the prison and no automobiles or individuals were permitted to pass the guard lines within which machine guns, riot guns and pistols were evident. No one was permitted to enter or leave the penitentiary. Tear gas bombs supplemented the armament of the guards within the walls.

Cordknit Bags

These bags of knitted cord are rapidly becoming the most popular as well as the smartest bags to carry with summer costumes. Perhaps one reason for their success lies in the fact that they come in so many colors which make possible such effective harmonies or contrasts.

DARE INTERPRETS the MODE

White tulle and fine white lace are used for this charming mid-summer evening frock, perfect for the "jeune fille." (Courtesy of Mirande, Paris.)

THE luxurious idea of lots of skins in a scarf has become well-known fact. The lucky lady who wears a four-skin silver scarf knows two things—that she is in the height of style, and that she is gazed upon by her less financially established friends as a lovely example of what money will do. But to take the place of a matched silver for skins will never be cheap, they aren't anywhere near as expensive as they have been, or as they will be again as soon as cooler weather returns.

All the little foxes are popular this summer except the red fox. The bright yellow-red color is trying to most types of women, and sort of hot for summer anyway. But to take the place of a matching furriers are developing kit fox—smaller than most pointed and silver foxes, but of a lovely dark gray color with thick, exquisite white markings. This kit fox has been used for a long time to trim sumptuous coats, but this season for the first time is being used as a separate scarf.

And these are good days for women who have longed secretly for a beautiful fur scarf of an expensive fur! The prices of all fur, including the sable of royalty, are down, and the furriers have discovered new ways to mount them, and the combination is irresistible. But don't think you'll get away with a single sable pelt any more than you would with a single fox pelt. Four or six or more skins are used to make scarves that are really capes, handled with supreme artistry and resulting in an effect of loveliness unmarred by graceless lines or awkward bulk.

Possibly, then, I should have said that furs were less expensive, but still too expensive for most of us. But we have the privilege of having our last winter's flat fur jackets made into smart capelets and looking as chic as our sabled sisters.

MOONLIGHT and the perfume of honeysuckle—slender youth and the midsummer spell of one's first romance! All these things, with their memory-stirring sweetness can be woven into an evening gown, if it be the inspiration and now is it?

Quaint Quirks In Styles Seen At Paris Races

By ALICE LANGELEIR

PARIS (INS)—The races in Paris probably never brought forth more quaint and curious quirks of fashion than in this year of 1931.

Two pretty Parisiennes almost created a scandal by appearing in ground-length white embroidered cotton frocks which were semi-transparent and showed their black lace undies beneath in quite alarming manner and their little black velvet hats covered just one side of their pretty heads, and no more. Breath-taking bustles were plainly evident beneath several gowns, but not the wire-cage of grandmother's day. They were really mountains of ruffles collected at the back of the belt and cascading downward to the hem.

Another fair woman was carrying a muff of fresh red roses and still another favored a bracelet of lilies of the valley.

A stunning woman with white hair wore a beret of fresh violets and another a straw hat with a wreath of sweet peas and a sunshade and fan made of the same flowers in pink and mauve. Pets, too, seem to have come back again with the revival of romance. One racing-fan was carrying a little brown monkey and another held a sick on which sat a brilliant-colored parrot.

Astonishing colored satin gloves are in for the moment. A bright green pair is wrist-length and has wide tops.

workmanship of an artist. And I was reminded of all these things when I sketched the Mirande evening gown for you today. It's such a fragile thing, of white tulle, hand-smocked, and delicate white lace. And so unusual too, with its flowers on skirt and decolletage of the same white lace! In short, the evening frock for the jeune fille to make her as lovely as her dreams.

COLORS are undeniably smart for summer evening wear, but there's a place and a need in every wardrobe for one evening gown of plain white. White gives the wearer a delicate beauty and charm that no other color can!

BY special request, I've sketched for you again the dull velvet and real amethyst quartz necklace which is some hundreds of years old, a family heirloom, and came from far northern Russia. The ring didn't originally belong with this pendant, but was spotted and coveted by a dear friend for years before it was possible to buy it and give it to me to wear with the pendant. So you see, costume jewelry isn't the latest fad in the world, now is it?

LOVE'S PRISONER By Barbara Webb

SYNOPSIS
BETH SHANNON, having lost one job, secures another as secretary to PHILIP DANE, with whom she promptly falls in love. Beth supports her invalid, widowed mother in an ugly tenement apartment in New York and has for friends FRANCIS and Ned Havens, young married people, with an apartment in the Bronx, and GEORGE METCALF, a saving, mean-minded young fellow, who has been very kind to Beth and her mother and wants to marry her. She feels that a great change has come over Beth lately and attributes it partly to the arrival of a trunk of fine clothes from Paris, sent by an aunt Beth does not remember, and to a mysterious letter marked "To be opened a year from today," which she has never seen. She also discovers, on seeking Beth out at her new office, that Beth is in love with Phil. Beth tells him, however, that Phil is engaged to CAROLINE GIBBONS, beautiful society girl, whom Beth has seen in the office.

CLARA SMITH, a woman working in the office, tells Beth she has overheard a conversation in which Beth's name was mentioned—and by Caroline Gibbons!

CHAPTER IX
Beth Smith smiled. "Plenty said and in that casual way girls like her affect, but with ice underneath it just the same, if you know what I mean."

Beth nodded. She didn't know, but she was too anxious to hear what had been said to get into an argument with Clara Smith. "First" Clara went on with mad-dening slowness, "she looked all around the office in there as though she had never seen it before. 'How can you stand it being cooped up in this tiny little place, Phil?' she asked. He said something about its suiting him all right and then she said, 'That's a new job you have out there, isn't it? The one that came in to tell you I was here.' Mr. Dane said, yes, you were new. Then she said, 'I think she's fond of you, Phil.'"

Beth couldn't help an exclamation of anger. "I like her nerve!" she said. "But wait, there's more to it than I've told you. He laughed when she said that and told her she had a vivid imagination, and then she changed her tone and said in a sort of coaxing way, 'What if you had such a pretty girl, Phil?' He laughed again and said there was no law that he knew of against a girl being pretty even if she did have to work, and so she changed her tone again and said, spitefully I thought that your clothes were terrible, that at least you ought to be better dressed if you were going to work for him. Then he answered, 'I'll raise her salary right away if you say so, Caroline,' and she pouted and said that wasn't what she meant at all and he knew it. He changed the subject then, but it looks to me as though she were jealous of you."

"What a ridiculous idea!" Beth said, laughing. "I don't think my being jealous of her would be."

General Manager
"Just what I thought myself," Clara answered triumphantly, "and that if I asked you out to dinner personally I think she's three kinds of a fool for putting such ideas into his head. She'll force him to notice you if she keeps harping on how pretty you are. And she'll force him into feeling sorry for you, too, if she talks about how poorly you dress. Not that I think you dress poorly, Beth, I think you dress very sensibly and nicely, but, heavens, that girl probably pays $7 a pair for her stockings alone! What does she know about dressing yourself on $25 a week?"

"Nothing at all," said Beth vigorously. She was relieved that there was one person at least who didn't suspect her secret passion for Philip Dane. A person, too, who saw them together every day. George knew all about it, or thought he did. Frank was suspicious. And Beth knew that her mother was quietly waiting for some confidence that Beth was unable to give.

She and Clara continued to talk about office matters, when some one behind Clara said in a pleasant voice, "I say, Clara, why haven't you introduced me to this young lady? She's been here working for Phil for pretty near a month now and, properly speaking, I don't know her name."

"Now that's too bad, Arnold," said Clara, putting her hand familiarly on his arm. "I'll remedy that little mistake right away. Beth, this is Mr. Arnold Stone, our general manager, and a good scout, too. Miss Beth Shannon, Arnold, Phil's new pet."

"Like it here?" he asked, sitting on the edge of her desk. "Very much," said Beth shyly. "Don't let Phil work you too hard. He's a fiend for work himself and he'll be the time doesn't know when to quit. Working like that is a vice, I tell him. But he won't listen to me. You might try persuading him yourself if you see him looking pale and wan."

"Oh, I haven't any influence with him," Beth protested, and yet she was happy to be talking openly with some one who called Philip Dane a friend. Arnold Stone remained a few minutes longer, chatting easily of nothing at all and then strode away again.

"Good for you," Clara Smith said heartily. "I can see that he likes you, and Arnold Stone is a friend worth having."

"Oh, my, no; nothing so exalted as that. He's general manager of the office, fills in wherever he's needed, has an awful nice personality and I can't think of any one I really like better."

"Let Me Go Home With You!" "Beth, let me go home with you. She saw him frequently after that and a friendship sprang up between them. He was older than Beth by twelve or fifteen years, and although he had a youthful face, his hair had turned gray. He was slender, of medium height, and with very brown eyes, said eyes at times, Beth thought. He had a gentle kind of humor, very different from that of any one Beth had ever known. He liked to tease her about little things, and to pretend that she was really a Princess in a disguise, dressed in rags, her living as a punishment for some terrible sin in a former incarnation. One afternoon he stopped at her desk and said: "Something tells me that if I asked you out to dinner

Dull Days Ahead In Fabrics for Smart Women

By ALICE LANGELEIR

PARIS (INS)—Dull days are ahead for smart women, with French fabric-makers featuring very dull effects in nearly all their fine fabrics for summer and autumn.

Dull satins come in plain colors and shaded pastels or embroidered effects. Dull velvets are very supple with little more body to them than the old-fashioned transparent or ring variety. The very newest dull velvet which promises to be a leader for winter, is like a supple divetene.

Very curious is the discreet use of metal in a woolen plaid fabric called "goldrop." It is a soft-toned mixture of wool and ostrich with tiny loops of metal and is very smart for fancy vestes. "Grades" is another wool and ostrich mixture with a contrast of black and one color in plaid design. "Silkair" is a closely-woven alpaca bouclé with a dark ground sprinkled with bouclé of rayon in one bright tone and white. Wools in lace weaves will have the upper hand in Paris next winter according to the manufacturers who are coming out with some lovely crepe ones and others in soft flat weaves and twills.

As We See It

Prophecy Coming True

When station K-TNT first went on the air, its owner and operator, Norman Baker, devoted hours of time each week in a vain endeavor to show radio fans that "freedom of the air" was a myth and that monopoly of the air was a sure and certain thing if control of radio ever became vested in a commission.

In addition to radio talks, Mr. Baker used the mails to convey his message and prediction to the people. He also went in person to Washington and attempted to show what the proposed White-Dill radio bill would do to independent radio stations if it became a law.

Even then, chain stations were being strategically placed throughout the country so that it was virtually impossible to tune out chain programs. He predicted the time would come when only chain stations would be given any consideration by the commission.

Many of those who heard Mr. Baker's radio talks believed he was "fanatical," that he was "riding a hobby," that a condition such as he prophesied could never be in this country.

The years have shown that he was right. Station after station has been deleted and, without exception, the stations removed from the air have been independent stations. One would suppose from the commission's wholesale slaughtering of independents that there was no question in the commissioners' minds but what they had the authority to do what they have done. But now, we find, there has been a lingering doubt as to the legality of their actions.

The Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit, in Chicago has just announced its decision in the appeal of former stations WMBB-WOK. These stations were refused a renewal of their license in 1928 and immediately stated they would continue to broadcast without one. The commission sought and obtained an injunction restraining the operation of the stations and an appeal was taken by the broadcasters. The grounds for appeal included a claim that property of enormous value was being confiscated without due process of law and contrary to the rights guaranteed by the constitution of the United States.

The opinion just handed down by the court sustains the commission and holds that the right to use the ether is permissive and no vested rights are obtainable by stations. What the court says does not have the effect of law, however, as the case really turned upon the fact that the broadcasters had not pursued the remedy prescribed by the radio law, namely an appeal to the District of Columbia Court of Appeals from the decision of the commission.

We mention the WMBB-WOK case here merely to show how the commission is grasping at straws to maintain its ruthless policy of deleting independent stations.

In commenting upon the WMBB-WOK decision, the general counsel of the commission, issued a statement, in part as follows: "With this decision, the Commission now is enabled to proceed with a firmer hand in bringing about the 'ideal' situation in radio. Overcrowding of stations in the broadcast band has been deplored, and engineering opinion is unanimous that only by a material reduction in the number of stations can broadcasting be substantially improved."

You will note that the old cry of improving reception is dragged forth from its moth-halls and is to be utilized again as an excuse to deprive communities of independent radio service. You may be perfectly sure that chain stations will not be deleted. It will be those stations who have steadfastly refused to handle chain programs that will go.

Every radio fan knows that there is little confusion on the radio dial today. With stations dividing time into as many as seven or eight parts, there are only a few spots on the dial where there is not good reception. It is true there are over six hundred stations operating on 90 channels but that does not mean that these stations operate simultaneously. As many as seven and eight stations divide the day and night hours and are silent while others of the group broadcast.

The commission could solve the "crowded" condition of the broadcast band very easily if it would insist that stations broadcasting the same chain program operate simultaneously on one channel, just as WOC and WHO do with marked success and to the satisfaction of everyone. There is no reason why twenty stations broadcasting the same program need twenty channels or wave lengths, nor do they need high power. There is always one station close to the listener from which he can hear a chain program. There is no reason why a resident of Muscatine need hear a chain program from St. Paul, St. Louis, Chicago, Cincinnati and points east, south, north and west, when he can hear identically the same program from Davenport, twenty-eight miles away.

The commission seems determined to give over the entire broadcast band to the chain organization. Last year, we understand, chain broadcasting brought in a revenue of nearly 60 million dollars. That is the reason why high power, select channels and every other favor desired by the Radio Corporation of America and its subsidiaries are forthcoming on demand.

Norman Baker has made a number of prophecies which have come true and it appears certain that his radio prophecy will be another true prediction—unless the people of the country arise and demand their rights. Congress meets in the fall and, from present indications, a sweeping investigation of the arbitrary and highhanded conduct of radio affairs by the commission is certain.

The "Food" Highway

To the average city dweller, the word highway brings up visions of the expensive high-speed roads that link the states of the nation together.

But there is another kind of highway that is of equal importance—the road that connects the small towns and farming areas with the main artery of travel.

Secondary, or "food" roads link Nature with the nation's dining tables. Over them come the fruit and vegetables, the dairy products and the cattle, hogs and grain that are necessary to the maintenance of life in our great cities.

Almost every state is now working on a program for development of its secondary road system. The need of moderate-cost, full-width, waterproof-surfaced highways to farms and small towns has never been so apparent as now.

Such roads are as vital to a nation's social and economic progress as main highways.

Our Platform for the People Is:

1. Less taxation.
2. Fewer State Commissions.
3. Universal school books.
4. Lower freight rates.
5. Return of river transportation.
6. A cleanup of some state institutions.
7. More efficiency in public offices.

Medical Fallacies

FALLACIES OF VACCINE AND SERUM THERAPY

Only a few years ago vaccines and serums were used much more extensively than of late years in the treatment of disease. From the time vaccine therapy was introduced by Wright in 1906 until 1923 practically all regular orthodox physicians used this method of treatment, and articles on the results of such treatment comprised a large part of the reading matter in medical journals. From 1923 until the present time there has been a steady and rapid decline in the use of vaccines and serums with a correspondingly fewer articles in orthodox medical journals concerning this method of treatment. However, in the articles published of recent years are many which express most frankly the disappointment of the profession generally because of the failure of a method of which so much had been expected. The attitude of the profession toward serums which is reflected in recent articles on the subject is in striking contrast to those of a comparatively few years ago when many physicians still adhered to the use of vaccines and serums they form a very small percentage of those who formerly favored such methods.

That serums ever gained the popularity that was evidenced by their widespread use is attributed in part to the fact that physicians did not take into consideration the natural history of the cases treated and that in a majority of cases the patient would have recovered in any case. Having used this treatment, any subsequent improvement was attributed to the vaccine or serums and much credit was given to this method which was not merited by facts but the natural course of the disease being taken into consideration. In a majority of cases the busy physician did not take this fact into consideration but administered a prescribed treatment, based on a new and untried method, and any and all improvement was attributed to the vaccines and serums by both physician and patient without taking other conditions into consideration. Under such circumstances the results obtained were never analyzed and were frequently misleading.

While all improvement was credited to the use of serums and vaccines, any adverse effects which later observation showed were due to serums and vaccines were attributed to whatever disease was being treated. In other words, the vaccines or serums were credited with all improvement but not with any of the harmful results which later experiments proved were often directly due to this method of treatment.

That serious consequences frequently followed the use of vaccines and serums is no longer denied since this method is not so generally used as formerly. In the journal of the AMA (June 1931, p. 335) in giving the results of a questionnaire on this subject which was sent to 1,500 physicians, it is stated: "conclusive evidence was brought forth to show that in a number of cases death was considered to have been caused by the use of vaccines subcutaneously injected," and attention was called to the reactions that occur in the body following the introduction of foreign proteins whether bacterial or other origin, and as a result "of recent events and a better knowledge of the course of some of the conditions treated the observers are beginning to lose some of their early enthusiasm as evidenced by their published and private contributions on the subject."

Another reason for the popularity and widespread use of serums and vaccines is stated in the Journal of the AMA (April, 1931, p. 1289) to be due "to the ease of use of the hypodermic needle which makes possible the parenteral introduction of proteins into the body," and often uncritical use of this method in the treatment of all manner of conditions, and to the drawing of clinical conclusions often without consideration of the natural history of the diseases treated."

That there is still a wide difference of opinion concerning the effectiveness of treatment by those using it is evidenced by the following quotation from the same article. The dangers are now not only admitted but taken into consideration which was not the case during the early enthusiasm of the supporters of serum therapy:

"Clinical as well as laboratory opinions concerning the method of action and ultimate results to the patient of the parenteral injection of foreign protein differ widely. Some clinicians use protein shock therapy extensively and believe it to be useful; others are firmly convinced of its uselessness or that the dangers outweigh the possible benefits to be obtained. . . . It sometimes happens that a new and more convenient condition is substituted for the original disability."

Gives Nature a Chance to Do the Work and Gives Credit to Serums. One of the advantages of vaccine and serum therapy and one that is not only new but most unduly mentioned by Dr. Ernest E. Jones in the Journal of the A. M. A. (April 1931, p. 1293) under the heading "Facts and Fallacies Concerning Vaccine and Serum Therapy." This angle of the serum treatment is referred to as "occupational therapy" and its advantage is that the treatment while away from the time until the natural forces of healing bring about recovery."

In certain disease groups this method is particularly recommended, and can be particularly helpful in both "patient and physician."

While the rise and fall of the popularity of vaccines and serums was about fifteen years, it has been in use in some form or other for many decades. The years during which the most enthusiasm was evidenced for vaccine therapy were those between 1906 and 1923. Its decline has been most decided and no doubt it will be considered an obsolete method when there is more evidence of its harmful effects. There has been sufficient already had much of it not been suppressed and propaganda substituted for substantiated facts as to its known results. However many catastrophes could be suppressed because of their horror and the number of victims of vaccine and serum therapy such as the disaster at Lubbeck when 75 children were killed outright; another at Medellin when 250 were killed as a result of a mistake by a physician in injecting the "wrong" serum; still another at Dallas, Texas, when a large number of school children were either fatally infected or permanently disabled; and numerous others of recent years about which more will be mentioned later in connection with the harmful effects of vaccines and serums in the treatment of disease due to fallacies in the theory on which it is based.

HOW GREED CHEATED REDTAIL THE HAWK

Of course, my dear, there is no need to talk to you of foolish greed. This being true, I must infer to skip this story you prefer.

I CAN'T help it if you do. Of course you don't have to read it unless you want to. But whether you read it or not I have to tell it because it explains a lot of things that seem to need explaining, among other things how Redtail the Hawk was cured of greediness. You remember that Redtail had yielded to temptation and had caught a little chicken for his breakfast very early on a certain morning. Now, the place where he had caught that chicken was a long way from the Green Forest and the home of Farmer Brown's Boy. At first he planned to fly to the nearest safe place and eat that chicken. Then he remembered that in suffering he was loathe to take the law in their own hands and refrain from violence. They feel the time has come that they must take a firm stand or suffer total extinction of their herds.

He looked down at the little chicken clutched in the claws of one foot. It was a very little chicken for three such young Redtails. In fact, it was so little that his own mother almost around it without tearing its tender flesh at all. He hadn't killed the chicken. More than that, he hadn't seriously hurt it. It was suffering to be sure, but its suffering was almost wholly from fright. It certainly was a frightened chicken. Yes, sir, it certainly was a frightened chicken. I don't wonder, do you? How do you suppose it felt? It was carried higher and higher up in the blue, blue sky until down below all the things which always had looked so big became small and unimportant. Danny Meadow Mouse knows. He was carried away once by Hooty the Owl, and since then Danny has been quite content with the ground. He no longer envies the birds.

On his way to his home in the Green Forest Redtail flew over the home of Farmer Brown's Boy. It was just after Farmer Brown's Boy had gone into the barn to milk the cows. Redtail, looking down with those wonderful eyes of his, saw Mrs. Featherlegs and her big family of chickens. He saw that those were bigger chickens than any he had already had, yet not so big but that he could hold one with one foot. He had one handful already, so to speak, but why not fill the other?

Now, if Redtail hadn't yielded to temptation in the first place he probably wouldn't have the second time. But it had been so easy catching that poor little chicken he was carrying home that he thought it would be just as easy to catch another.

"There is no danger," thought he. "This is a very small chicken for a hungry family as I have waiting for me. Besides, I am half starved myself. I may as well have two instead of one." He dropped the first one nearer to the earth all the time watching sharply for danger. There was none that he could see. "Well, here goes for both hands full," he chuckled, and closing his wings, shot down with the claws of the empty foot spread to seize one of the chickens.

But Redtail didn't know Mrs. Featherlegs. If he had known her then as he does now in would have thought twice before trying to catch one of HER chickens. Instead of acting afraid, as hens usually do when Redtail appears, Mrs. Featherlegs threw her head and neck. He suddenly forgot all about wanting another chicken. In fact, he forgot about the one he had already caught, and in his hurry to get away from that angry hen he let go. That was no place for him and he knew it. So he beat frantically with his broad wings and was glad enough to get away from Mrs. Featherlegs.

But as he flew he thought sadly of the trick which Greed had played him. It had promised him more and then had cheated him of that which he had wanted. And down in Farmer Brown's dooryard a very

Peoples Pulpit:

Several farmers of Deerfield township, Chickasaw county, were notified to have their herds ready to be given the tuberculin test on Monday, July 13th.

The farmers are very much opposed to the test considering it inefficient and unreliable. Ben Ruffoff's herd was the first to be tested. The test was met at five o'clock in the morning by approximately 150 determined and outraged farmers who feel that this abuse has been carried too far.

They expressed their opinion to the test in very strong language and expressing their disgust of the law and of the sinister and deceitful methods used in getting this law enacted. The farmers are an honest, industrious, law abiding and home making people.

They feel that their rights and liberties are being sacrificed. While they are loathe to take the law in their own hands and refrain from violence. They feel the time has come that they must take a firm stand or suffer total extinction of their herds.

Thanking you, A. J. Krall, Bassett, Ia.

EDITOR'S NOTE: The above letter was read by Norman Baker, who advises as follows:

It is true the organized doctors and serum companies have succeeded in getting unfair and unjust laws passed to protect them and make at some future time. Even then, perhaps the patient would be willing to run his chances of a little more suffering at some future date, rather than to be consumed along with his ailment in his banishment.

It is possible that if people could come back and talk to us so that we could understand them, they might use quite forceful language in expressing their opinion over the way they had been allowed to slip away from material things, relatives, and other worldly interests; in fact, they might become so indignant as to attempt force in their endeavors to make a disease disappear upon the one, or ones, responsible for their untimely departure.

When a patient places his body in a doctor's hands for treatment, he usually does so with faith, and probably some hope, at least that used to be the way in the "good old days." As the days go by changes occur in all things, caring for the sick being no exception.

Patients are getting so that they look upon a doctor as the "long, long trail" instead of one in whom "faith, hope and trust" may be placed. In fact people are getting so leery that the doctor's office has quite a few vacant chairs, often.

Nowadays the doctors are busy trying to figure ways and means of catching more of the illusive dollars to which patient's adhere to more closely than formerly. People are slowly becoming more educated to the fact that a doctor is supposed to be a teacher and that they themselves can take pretty good care of their own bodies, once they have been given sensible advice. People are realizing that they are not putting a mortgage on their body for a doctor to fore close just because they seek treatment for their ills.

It is said that in China a doctor loses his pay when his patients become sick. China is a much older country than the western hemisphere and maybe they have learned a thing or two; maybe they are not so dumb.

What would happen if people asked for written statements from hospital staffs to the effect that "X-ray, Radium and knives would not be used without the consent of patient, or other proper authority, excepting in accidental emergency, and without exploratory ambitions in mind."

Even though it is said that the appearance of a doctor of much value to the human body, a thought should

THE PATIENT AND THE DOCTOR. Constant study brings up the thought as to whether it is better to study each disease separately and to try and find a specific reason for it, or to concentrate upon the necessary measures to assure one of clean body so that no disease can live in it regardless of the name it may be labeled with.

In many cases where one is chasing an elusive germ or a theory and trying to fasten it to a particular manifestation of ill-health, too much thought and energy is put on the disease and not enough given to the patient. There are preparations which will over come disease but which at the same time destroy healthy tissues and injure the body—many times causing death.

What is the fun of overcoming a diseased condition in a patient's body if the patient's body is going to be destroyed also. No doubt the patient would like to go on living and rejoice with the doctor in the triumph of overcoming the adversary. Too many times the patient is forgotten in the concentrated activity of eradicating a disease and becomes a victim of the treatment along with the disease. Obviously, this is not so good for the patient, except perhaps, that he may be relieved of suffering some pain again.

Give It a Thought

HOW EASY it is to change the course of a ship at the start, But how hard When well on the wrong course. It is easy also to avoid a lie By not giving birth to an evasion By misrepresenting through fear, envy or selfishness.

THERE IS NO man, Be he ever so poor, Who can be charitable With some by-product—A waste to himself, But a necessity to his less fortunate companions.

OFTEN our only real excuse For having no use for certain good things is that we are guilty. We advertise it for our condemnation. If innocent, We strive to please for recognition.

IT IS in the nights of sorrow That we really grow; And we blossom in the days of wages According to how we have spent our efforts.

be given to the idea that possibly the patient would like to keep the blamed thing for a souvenir of pre-historic days. Yes Sir! The time is coming when the doctor must consider the patient and to realize that it is the patient who has the disease and that if the proper measures are taken to cleanse and preserve (not in alcohol) the patient, the disease will promptly vacate, and the patient can rejoice happily with the doctor over their successful efforts in routing their enemy. It is unfair for the doctor to be selfish in his victory over disease. The patient furnishes the body and the disease and he has a right to stay on and be at the party after the fight is over.

An 18-day period of fasting proved fatal to Mrs. Anna Mahoney, 53 years old, of Los Angeles, who in a spirit of religious fervor denied herself all food.

The Power of Mind Over Body

By NORMAN BAKER

(Courtesy TNT Magazine) (Ed. Note: What follows is an installment of an article by Norman Baker which began in the June 24 issue of this paper. An installment will be published each day.)

At every opportune time think, believe and suggest to yourself, "I will 'do it' and will do it," or make other resolutions to that effect and you will be surprised to note within a few weeks the spirit of determination and will power that has developed within you. You will experience a new line of ideas, a new line of thought and a new spirit of confidence, determination and will power that will startle you. That does not mean that one can simply suggest those resolutions to themselves and go about without the spirit and a sincere desire to accomplish them, and still be able to reach the stage of strengthened will power. When you suggest to yourself, that "you will do it," you must make up your mind that "you are going to do it."

And actually try with all your strength. Right here, let me remind you of the illustration drawn in a previous article regarding the mind being like a house with the objective mind on the outside of the door as a guard and the subjective mind on the inside as a servant. Remember, the subjective mind, or servant, is very alert and fully awake every moment of your life and that the objective mind is dormant in sleep, active only while you are conscious. That force which continues to suggest "I will" combined with your firm belief that you can and will do the thing, will be planted as a suggestion upon your subjective mind and will unconsciously become a part of you, thus shaping your activities mentally and physically until success is attained. The main reason the average person does not succeed along these lines is because he does not have the faith to believe that he can and start his training in a half-hearted way. Perhaps he tries for a day or two, telling that he will do a certain thing and because he does not accomplish a difficult undertaking within a week or two he imagines that he is wasting his time. He feels that these things come about in a magical way and that all you have to do is think and it will be done.

You have to think more than once. You have to keep thinking, thinking, thinking until you force yourself into a change of your entire mental make-up, so that when you set out to do a thing today you will keep on until you do it, even though it is something that you attempted to do before and failed. You must go at it again with the deliberate determination that you positively will not fail. Don't even as much as stop to think what the conditions would be if you did fail, but look forward always to what the conditions will be after you succeed.

When you once get your will power strengthened and trained, it will give you more pleasure than numerous things that you now imagine you enjoy in life. The pleasure of accomplishing things that heretofore were impossible and entirely out of the scope of your thought will give you a pleasure that is hard to explain in words. It requires only the accomplishment of one thing which in the past you have been unable to do to start you on the road to success. That one thing will induce such a spirit of confidence and determination that, more than anything else, it will push you on and on to do greater and greater things each day.

There is no better way to start your effort along lines of developing your will than by using suggestion. Of the majority of the powers of suggestion few are ever realized. The greatest power of suggestion is the power of suggestion. While auto-suggestion can be given to oneself through the day while performing the daily work, still it is much harder to rivet auto-suggestion in the world and above all things it will push you on and on to do greater and greater things each day.

In the evening our day's work is done. We are more or less tired and go to bed with the idea of resting our bodies. As we lie in bed in our waking state two minds are with us, the subjective and the objective. (Here again, it will be well for the reader to recall the article in the May issue of TNT regarding the distinction between the two minds.) Remember the objective mind is capable of intelligent reasoning and the subjective is not. If while lying in bed with muscles fully relaxed, you will concentrate your mind on a few determined thoughts keeping such thoughts to yourself mentally, but not expressing them aloud and making no special effort in any way that would cause you to be nervous of interfering with your relaxed state, you will find that sleep will soon overtake you.

SHARKEY IN BETTER SHAPE FOR BOUT THAN WALKER

IGOE PUZZLED BUT SWEARS IT WILL BE FIGHT

Scribe Says Outlook For Real Scrap Is Fascinating

BY HYPE IGOE
INS Sports Writer
POMPTON LAKES, N. J.—This is the day before the battle, mother. It might be well to run over the notes I've made at the camps of Mickey Walker and Jack Sharkey. I don't mean the pencil and paper kind. Just the notes of my eyes.

What manner of man is this "Sam" the giant killer and what chance has he to kill a giant? I think Sharkey isn't a giant then little "Sammy" is bawny.

In the first place, those who boxed with Walker hit him with right hands to the body less than three times in eight days. I was painstaking observer. In those eight days I saw Walker hit spar mates with fifty right hand punches to the jaw and only one of them buckled at the knees and had to be propped up so he could recover.

I saw Walker land solidly with a left hook to the body two hundred times and yet none of his spar boys went down. I wasn't there the day Mickey hit his German sparring partner, breaking three of his ribs. That was a sock. It might be that thereafter, Mickey, out of pity held back the full force of his blows.

Walker is essentially a counter fighter. Can a counter fighter whip a deft fellow like Sharkey who can be as aggressive or devilishly cunning in a defensive way.

Sharkey is in better condition than is Walker. He is a bit leaner and his muscles are more pronounced. Mickey expects to fight off six extra pounds that he purposely had added to himself when he gets in the ring with Sharkey. Jack does not pull up breathing hard as does Mickey. He finishes a hard work without drawing a long breath.

He boxes brilliantly one moment and in shoddy fashion the next. He explained to Benny Leonard and four war correspondents that he was not doing well because he was "trying too hard to impress."

I'm free to admit that the pair of them have me puzzled. It is a fascinating outlook. This is a boxing that I know of boxing that it is going to be a blood-curdling spectacle.

Ruling Follows His Failure to Appear For Play-Off

Muscatine's entrants in the state amateur tournament were not far so well. Harold Figg's 87 being low of the six shooting from here. Frank Chandler was next with an 88. Charles Meerdink shot an 89. Glenn Fairall covered the 18 holes in 93. Glen Barnard in 99 and Fenton Barnard in an even 100. None of the scores were low enough to qualify them for championship flight.

MASON CITY COUNTRY CLUB, MASON CITY, Ia.—(INS)—Bob McCrary of Des Moines, leader in 1930 trans-Mississippi golf championship this morning was ruled out of the championship flight of the 1931 Iowa state golf tournament here.

The ruling followed McCrary's failure to appear at the first tee at seven o'clock this morning to play off with fifteen other golfers a tie for the 154 places among the low qualifiers yesterday.

The Little Scott from Des Moines was among the sixteen who scored an 81 yesterday. Since fifty other golfers were below that figure it was necessary to hold a play-off this morning to determine the fourteen who would be permitted to shoot among the 64 golfers left in the qualifying round.

GIANT BOSS TO CONTINUE WAR AGAINST UMPs

McGraw to Carry His Umpire Feud Up to League Prexy

BY COPELAND C. BURG
INS Sports Writer

NEW YORK—You can hear anything in New York, including that John McGraw is going to prove whether or not umpires are people.

From the city of St. Louis come whistlers that the manager of the New York Giants intends to continue his war against what he terms incompetent umpires to the bitter end.

Word today was that McGraw will carry his umpire feud and his row with John A. Heydler, president of the National League, right into the parlor of baseball, protesting at the next meeting of the league in December.

Heydler Rules League
McGraw may bring some reforms among umpires but if he plans a "ret Heydler" campaign it would probably result in nothing.

Heydler has been head of the circuit since 1918 and generally has had his say and way.

While McGraw was under a three-day suspension, manager Bill Killebrew of the St. Louis Browns went about handicapped by a warning from umpire "Buck" Owens, w/ admonished the St. Louis manager after he chased Kress, Levey and Gray from the Yankee stadium yesterday. After the trio had been ousted by Owens, following an argument as to whether a ball was fair or foul, Owens shouted to Killebrew:

"An' you, Mr. Killfer, will get out, too, if you don't pipe down."

Yanks Beat Browns
It must be said Owens could have chased the entire St. Louis team, excepting pitcher Stewart and the result would have been the same.

Mr. Stewart insisted on walking when he should have struck them out, and dressed a wild pitch, the Yanks won 8 to 5.

Manager Hornsby sent a revamped team against Brooklyn and the Cubs triumphed, 1 to 0. Hack Wilson was benched, Cuyler rolled to center field, with Danny Taylor in left and Barton in right. Mr. Taylor proved important, poking a triple. Hemmeyer, Chicago catcher, caught Taylor. William Watson, Clark gave the Bruins only three hits, while the Robins got seven off Charlie Root. St. Louis is now six games in front of Brooklyn. Chicago and New York separated by only ten points.

A's Trim White Sox
The Chicago White Sox staged a triple steal on the Athletics, but as Haas and Fox each got homers, Simmons hit safely three and the A's snatched it, 12 to 7.

Clint Brown held the Boston Red Sox to four hits, while Cleveland got 14, rolling it away, 9 to 2.

Six singles and two errors gave Washington six runs in the second inning and the Senators downed Detroit, 7 to 3. Scores by innings:

Epitaph in a Cork, Eng churchyard..

Rudy Dusek, in testing the strength of his neck muscles, once hung suspended from a hangman's rope for five minutes. Since that experiment Dusek has confined his neck testing to the ground. He allows four men, two on each end of a rope, to pull with all their strength while the rope is tied about his neck. His neck is so abnormal and muscular that he not only withstands the pressure, but calmly munches the sandwich and drinks a glass of milk during the test.

A billy goat that chases rabbits and trees 'coons and 'possums is a rarity, but such an animal is owned by General P. Wade of Greenville, S. C. This freak billy was raised with several beagle hounds, and when the hounds were on a chase the spirit of the hunt naturally got into the goat's blood. He runs along in the midst of the pack baying as loud and excitedly as the dogs.

Not only is the prize goat an accomplished hunter, but he is the official "watchdog" of the house and garden. He carefully guards against all intruders while the beagles lie peacefully snoozing beneath the porch.

Asbestos has remained unchanged down through the ages, regardless of earth pressure and volcanic heat.

TENNIS QUEEN STILL REIGNS

Helen Wills Moody's Two Straight Wins Are Impressive

MANCHESTER, Mass.—(INS)—Mrs. Helen Wills Moody's prestige as queen of all she surveys in the women's tennis world is still secure. All the other players in the Essex Country club's annual invitation tournament, and all the spectators as well, were willing to concede that today, after Queen Helen's debut yesterday, in which she coasted through two straight-set victories.

After beating Mrs. Robert Morris of Boston, 6-0, 6-1, Mrs. Moody trounced the experienced Margaret Lane of Lenox, 6-3, 6-1, to enter the third round.

Mrs. Moody's service was a bit erratic during her match with Miss Lane, but aside from that slight lapse the tennis queen's game was just as forceful and brilliant as a year ago, when she won the Wimbledon singles laurels.

The world's champion is playing the same hard-hitting game which always marked her performance on the court. The chop and spin shots which the club experts said she was developing, were not evident against Mrs. Morris or Miss Lane, but that was probably because Mrs. Moody had no occasion to use them.

There were no upsets in the early rounds, the favorites all coming through with expected victories.

Wednesday Go Will Not Be Broadcast

NEW YORK —(INS)—The bout between Jack Sharkey and Mickey Walker in Brooklyn tomorrow night will not be broadcast, according to announcement today. The promoters refused several offers for the radio rights, including one bid of $20,000.

The team that is ahead July 4th wins the pennant and Connie Mack now should be trying out some of his new pitchers.

SHAKEUP HELPS CUBS WIN, 1-0

Blake Sent to Phils and Hack Benched for Third Time

CHICAGO—(INS)—Judged by the first game, at least, manager Hornsby's shakeup of the Chicago Cubs was a distinct success.

After weeks of rumor, John Fred "Sheriff" Blake right handed pitcher, was sent to the Phils at the waiver price of $7,500. He had been with the Cubs seven and a half seasons and in only two of them won as many games as he lost.

Hack Wilson, 1930 home run king, was benched for the third time this season and Kiki Cuyler was switched to center field, Danny Taylor coast league recruit, made his debut in right field and batted in fourth position.

The net result of all this was that the Cubs got only three hits off William Watson Clark of the Robins but won anyway, 1 to 0, mainly because of Danny Taylor's two hits, one a triple.

Reports were current today that Arthur the Great Shires, talkative biter now was Milwaukee in the American association, might be purchased by the Cubs. William Wrigley, Jr., owner of the Cubs, is said to be willing to pay $50,000 for the former Sox player who went out of the American league for $10,000. Milwaukee hopes to receive $75,000 either from the Cubs or Cleveland Indians.

SHARKEY MUST KAYO MICK TO KEEP PRESTIGE

Garrulous Gob Idle Since Fight With Max Schmeling

By JAMES L. KILGALLIN
INS Sports Writer

NEW YORK—Out of the ring for over a year, Jack Sharkey will undertake tomorrow night the man's size job of stopping Mickey Walker in their fifteen-round bout at Ebbets field in Brooklyn for the benefit of the milk fund. In order to maintain his prestige as America's premier heavyweight, Sharkey must do more than win the decision—points—he must knock Walker out.

Sharkey hasn't fought since the night of June 12, 1930, when he met Max Schmeling in New York for the heavyweight championship. That battle, which drew an attendance of 79,222 and a gross gate of $749,935, wound up in wild disorder, with Schmeling gaining the decision because of a foul delivered after 2 minutes and 55 seconds of fighting in the fourth round. Up to the moment he unleashed a low left hook, Sharkey had been giving Schmeling a terrific shellacking.

Sharkey Weighs 197
Sharkey will enter the ring in first class condition, weighing about 187 pounds, nearly thirty pounds heavier than Walker. Often when pugilists lay off for a long period, they find their timing off and lack that certain assurance that leads to victory.

However, most experts speculate more on Sharkey's mental attitude than on his lack of recent competition. Judges of fighters have expressed this opinion: "If Sharkey don't lose his head he will win."

Backing up this statement, they point to the Bostonian's record as an hysterical scrapper. They cite the Schmeling setto as an excellent illustration of Sharkey's strange mental misuses, his sudden and dramatic losing of the fight which he virtually won.

On another occasion, Sharkey had Jack Dempsey in a bad way when he foolishly turned to the referee to protest a low blow only to be knocked out cold by Dempsey who shot a terrific hook to the chin.

The fight fans recall, too, that Sharkey cried in the ring the night in Miami that he had Phil Scott on the floor. Scott was moaning that he was fouled and Sharkey thought he was disqualified although as a matter of fact he was awarded the fight.

Gob Is Temperamental
Sharkey is temperamental and easily angered. Outwardly a phlegmatic fellow he lashes himself into a fury in the ring and is always dangerous until the other fellow definitely proves that he is his equal.

In Walker's corner will be the shrewdest manager of fighters in the world, Jack Kearns. Of late Kearns has done and said a number of things calculated to disturb Sharkey exceedingly, although the latter professes to be only amused at such antics. Kearns no doubt figures an angry Sharkey would be easier to conquer than a Sharkey who is calm and collected.

Mickey Courageous Fighter
Sharkey will need all his hits in fighting Walker, for he is going against as courageous a ring man as ever climbed through the ropes. If there is anything that Walker has that Sharkey lacks it is the will to win. Many times in his long career, Walker has turned defeat into victory by sheer will power and heart.

Walker's winning personality may disturb the mental poise of Sharkey if the fight goes along toward the tenth round. Mickey is a great finisher. Fight followers will always remember the amazing rally he staged the night six years ago when he lost to Harry Greb at the polo grounds, it wasn't good enough to win, but it drew the admiration of even Greb's most loyal adherents. Walker displayed this same quality in other battles, notably when he boxed Dave Shade for the welterweight crown in 1925, which he won, and again in Chicago when he took the middleweight diadem from Tiger Flowers.

IN PLACE OF A MEMORY

By Helen Rutherford Barton

Ten years had elapsed since Jeff Ryder had been born, and he was now seeking or cruising for pirates in the old barn on Snyder avenue; ten years during which both had graduated from high school and grown up to find their own particular niche in the world.

And now Jeff Ryder was reading in a paper from home—three weeks ago—that his father had been condemned by city authorities and was to be razed to make room for a new development tract. "Torn down along with a ghostly childhood memories to make room for a row of thin-boarded, modern bungalows."

Unconsciously the man sighed; he remembered how his father had carried him to almost every corner of the globe—to Rio and Buenos Aires, Port Said, Singapore and Nanaimo; how many times they had sailed down the Mozambique coast where a bungalow meant a tall hut erected on poles and thatched with straw; how often they had dined at the tables of the Maharaja of Java, where the menu varied daily between coffee and meat, and vasa-dara and coffee and meat. And he felt a vague twinge of conscience; he should have kept in touch with Eleanor all

Oh, well, he'd wager El had made good. She had such a fiery disposition to go with that mop of rust-colored hair, and her chin—well—was a chin, and it went well with her red hair, but somehow was in a strange contrast to the mousy, yellowish-brown hair she'd dyed. Blue eyes. Oh, well—tomorrow was San Cristobal and it wasn't much of a trip up from there. Perhaps the razing had been delayed. Gosh, it would be great if they were still standing! If the ropes and iron rings and trapeze were still there to remind her of the circus, she'd be glad. It was difficult, circus stunt and hanging white-faced and terrified until he could get up onto the trapeze.

Modern excursion steamers of today, such as the Capital, differ widely from those of forty or fifty years ago. Despite all the pleasures they provided, the old excursion boats provided not nearly so many conveniences and certainly were not as luxurious as they are today.

In the old days all the boats had three decks. The Capital's deck was a small dance floor with music furnished by a makeshift five-piece band. An enclosed stufy cabin was on the second deck, with the camp kitchen and galley on the third, and the engine deck. The third deck, with its outer railings, was exposed to the sun, and the location of the water barrel if any—was always a mystery, which nobody bothered much to solve.

It is a far cry from those picturesque old boats to the modern excursion steamer of today, with two decks and a huge funnel.

The dance is the thing today, and boat is equipped with several electric refrigerators. Excursionists riding on the old boats found it necessary to bring their own lunch if they expected to eat during an all-day trip. The Capital's kitchen is equipped with a modern cafeteria, where passengers may obtain the same fare they would order at their favorite hotel. A competent chef is in charge of this department. Although some persons still bring their basket lunches on the all-day trips, the prices are so reasonable in the cafeteria that it is not unusual to find a passenger economy to have the dinner on the boat.

The uncomfortable camp stools used on the steamers of forty years ago have been replaced by comfortable cushioned chairs and wicker furniture. Railings have been heightened so that children may romp in safety.

As a matter of fact, the excursion steamer of today is so comfortable and convenient that it is hard to get all the convergence of its modern home.

MILWAUKEE — (NS) — Eleven workmen caught in a heating tunnel by flood following a heavy rainstorm were rescued today when firemen pumped out the 200-foot tube.

Although army officials said only 11 were at work in the underground structure, Otto Rueck, operator of the elevator leading to the 37-foot deep tunnel declared he saw 22 bodies carried along by the rushing water.

The rescued men had found safety in two airtight compartments. Firemen entering the tunnel determined that the men were still alive by signaling with knockers and by opening the doors of the safety compartments.

9 TO 1

Do you realize that ONE new yearly subscription secured on or before Monday, July 27th, will count as many votes as NINE new yearly subscriptions secured during the final period of the campaign.

This Is Your Last BIG OPPORTUNITY

"Cinch" the Prize of Your Choice By 10
O'clock Monday Night July 27th

WORK WHILE YOUR EFFORTS COUNT MOST

Time is flying fast—only eight days remain for big votes—hustle is the keynote right now. The winners in the Midwest Free Press Campaign may be determined within these last few days of the all-important first period

Never again during the campaign will it be possible to secure so many votes on subscriptions as between now and Monday night, July 27th. To hold back subscriptions now or depend on "promises" to subscribe at a later date simply means that you will have to take less votes on such subscriptions. We are putting it up to you fairly and squarely—if you would be declared the winner of one of the big cars or cash prizes, you cannot possibly afford to let this big vote period pass without putting forth your very best efforts while subscriptions are at their highest value.
